The Romans

Outline

- Who were the Romans
- Clothes
- Food
- Buildings
- The army
- Gods
- Fun and games
- Schools

Who were the Romans

The green bits show how far the Romans spread over Europe.

Romans from all over the world

Some of these people might come from Gaul, Italy, Spain, Greece, North Africa or the middle east.

The Romans invaded Britain in 43 AD and ruled it for almost 400 years. People from all over the Roman empire came and traded with and lived in Britain.

What did the Romans wear?

Roman ladies wore a long tunic that almost touched the floor.

Men wore togas when they wanted to look smart.

What did the Romans eat?

The more unusual food the more guests at the dinner party.

Romans drank wine. Rich Romans served expensive and unusual food to show off.

Roman buildings

Roman Aqueducts in Pont du Gard in southern France.

Romans built Hadrian's wall in Scotland. It took nine years to build it.

Roman homes

Wealthy Romans lived in large detached houses made of stone or brick called “villas”.

The homes of wealthy Romans looked bare from the outside.

The Roman army

The Roman empire became very strong because it had a very good Army to help it conquer and later control all the other lands.

A Roman soldier

- A professional soldier.
- He would have joined the Roman army for twenty five years.

Roman gods

Juno, Goddess
of women

Jupiter, King of the gods

Roman fun and games

Roman plays were often on at the Roman theatre. A tragedy play would have a sad ending.

The two roman games that they liked to watch the most were chariot racing and gladiators.

Roman schools

- No public schools.
- Rich children studied at home.
- Subjects were reading, writing and arithmetic.
- In many homes slaves taught the children.
- Before the age of fourteen they had learned Latin and Greek.

Summary

- Who were the Romans
- Clothes
- Food
- Buildings and towns
- The army
- Gods
- Fun and games
- Schools

Bye bye and thank you